Terry Williams

“How Elderly Lose Their Rights”

Terry Williams specializes in legal research relating to elder, family, and social phenomena. As a former legal assistant and real estate agents, Ms. Williams discovered a criminal enterprise running through the courts of Las Vegas, operating under the guise of legitimate guardianship. Having called the matter to the attention of numerous law enforcement agencies and having become a highly sought after journalistic source, Ms. Williams debuts her findings in forth the New Yorker article entitled, The takeover — How the Elderly Lose Their Rights, as well as THE GUARDIANS documentary, a riveting feature-length film evidencing a racketeering operation targeting wealthy seniors. The chief purpose of the criminal operation is using the legal system to intercept generational and legacy wealth.
